The main points of the video are:

- The doctors are working on vaccines for coronavirus.
- The air pollution is becoming very low and the canals in Venice are becoming unusually clear.
- Puzzles are becoming more popular.
- The restrictions are coming down where coronavirus first hit.

I agree with the video.

One of the positive things from the coronavirus is that people are looking after each other more. They are doing this by helping their neighbours and friends by doing their shopping. They are also leaving kind messages in their mailboxes.

People are having fun and are looking on the good side of coronavirus. Some of the ways people are looking on the bright side is playing music on the streets. Lots of people are taking this as an opportunity to do something new.

Some of the positives I've seen come from the coronavirus is that I've been able to do different things at home like painting and duolingo. We have started playing Monopoly as a family which has been tremendously fun.

People could use this time at home to do amazing things like play the guitar, write, draw, ride the skateboard, learn to play lacrosse, build a fort that you can sleep in and learn another language. There is so much you can do in this time at home so try something new.

Home based learning has been good. I've learnt that if you have the right mindset, know what you have to and be organised, then you will be able to get work done. I can get My tasks done by trying to focus without distractions and reminding myself that when my work is done I will be able to continue our Lego calls with Molly and Amelia.
